✗ A burial is a ceremony at which someone who has died is buried.
✗ An alternative to burial is cremation.
✗ The deceased may also have opted during his or her lifetime to leave his body to science. You can gain more information about this from the Vesalius Institute, tel. 016 33 66 81.

Burial

The relatives may bury the deceased in:

✔ the municipality where he was resident;
✔ the municipality where the family owns a burial plot;
✔ the municipality in which he died.

Cremation

With a cremation, the relatives may have the ashes scattered, buried or deposited at the cemetery.
Required documents:

• death attestation form (model IIIC or IIID): may be obtained from the mortuary during opening hours;
• the deceased’s identity card;
• his marriage record;
• authorisation for burial: issued by the municipality where the burial will take place;

• a certificate from a doctor appointed by the municipal authorities;
• if necessary, authorisation for ashes to be scattered, buried or kept in an urn in a place other than the cemetery. The associated application must have been signed by all living relatives of the first degree by blood or marriage. Written permission from the landowner is also required if it cannot be proved that the location belongs to the relative(s).
